

CHESS PSEUDONYMS AND SIGNATURES

Caveat Lector! This is very much work in progress. The Preface is somewhat unfinished, and there are many more sources to go through for known and unknown pseudonyms. I welcome all suggestions, even if they appear to be totally obvious, for disposition or further material.

PREFACE

This work collects known and ‘important’ unknown pseudonyms and signatures from chess publications and events.

A pseudonym is considered to be a name or signature that hides the true identity of the person to greater or lesser degree while a signature is taken to refer to a much shortened form of a name.

Importance is more difficult to assess, particularly in regard to still unknown pseudonyms or signatures. In general, simple initials appearing only once will be excluded.

Variations and changes in names can to some extent cloak identity as well, (e.g. Takács vs. Sydlauer) but at present they are not included. Nor are mottos used to temporarily hide the identities of composition tourney contestants from the judges included.

Main Entries

The main entries associate a pseudonym or signature with identity (if known), or a source, time and country associated with the pseudonym if identity remains unknown.

Mat

Olland, Adolf Georg G1

M.C.

? (Italy, 1881) G2 p 31

Mehlmann, M.

Tuhan-Baranowski, Leon G1

Plain pseudonyms are sorted by family name, if there seems to be one (e.g. Caesar, Ave). No attempt has been made to interpret name parts, such as ‘M.’ or ‘P.’ (initial or honorific/title?). Signatures and initials appear exactly as given.

If identity remains unknown, it is indicated by a ‘?’ followed by a city or country, or source, and the years(s) in which the pseudonym was used.

Source references are as given below.

Shagird

Loveday, Rev. Henry Augustus G1

Shagird

Ackermann, Otto G1

In cases where there seem to be some doubt about the correctness of an entry, comments have been added, and further references added.

When the same pseudonym or signature appears to have been used by different persons, more than one identity and source is given. Such entries will be extended with dates and place to simplify disambiguation.

Pseudonyms are considered to be the same if all letters (including accents) are the same.

Descriptive pseudonyms have been crossreferenced.

Ewell, U.

(‘translator’ of Vogt’s Letters on Chess, 1848)

Lewis, William CM1 1858 p 61-2

Many entries have been taken from Jeremy Gaige’s Chess Personalia, and reference that source. Earlier sources will be used when known.

ALMOST PSEUDONYMS

I occasionally come across, or am told about, pseudonyms or name variations that do not quite fit the limitations I have set for this work: names thought to be pseudonyms but not obviously intended to hide an identity, or pseudonyms used by chess personages but not sufficiently well confirmed to be related to chess, etc.

I have not yet decided what to do with these—for the moment I will list them here, without source attribution. If and when they are moved to the main part, I'll add source references. (Plain name changes are generally listed under both names in Gaige's Chess Personalia, so I see no reason to repeat them here.)

Ideka

von Kolisch, I. (not confirmed to have been used for chess-related material.)

Kannengiesser

Kockelkorn, Karl (problemist—name of his stepfather, and used for a time by Kockelkorn.)

O. Lorde, Alphonse Rognon, E.E.

Bartlett, Eric Ericson, H.W.

Shinkright, Ivan Caskowski, Miss Eltoe

These are currently listed as pseudonyms for A.C. White. They seem to have been used only (?) in the Christmas story 'A Midwinter Night's Dream' (British Chess Magazine, December 1909; repr. in A.C.W.: Flights of Fancy in the Chess World, 1919), and appear to be more joke names than proper pseudonyms: the problem by E.E. Bartlett is said to be the frontispiece of '7777 Chess Croquettes, that most popular of chess books, which is now being set to music for presentation at Covent Garden next season.' If no more 'serious' use of these pseudonyms is discovered, they may be withdrawn to this section
